

Bloomsday

16 June 2017
Public Reading from James Joyce's Ulysses
at 14.30

16 June 1904 is the day on which James Joyce set Ulysses, the most well-known of modern novels: on that day Stephen Daedalus and Leopold Bloom each took their epic journeys through Dublin. Bloomsday, the annual celebration of those events, has become a tradition for Joyce enthusiasts all over the world. The British Institute of Florence celebrates Joyce and his novel; this year we are reading the fourteenth episode of the novel, generally known by its Homeric title 'Oxen of the Sun'.

Everyone is welcome to join us, to read aloud or to listen.

The British Institute of Florence, Harold Acton Library, Lungarno Guicciardini, 9 Firenze, tel.055 26778270